PLAYMATE IN FAMILY FOR MASTER McLEAN

Rumor That Stork Is Winging Way Threatens Future of Pick Any Chum.

Master Vinson Walsh McLean is to have a playmate in his own family! Master Shirley Carter, Jr., son of Dr. Shirley Carter, of Warrenton, Va., who has been the chum and general factotum of Master Vinson Walsh McLean for several years, will find his new playmate in the form of a little girl, who is to be named after the late Master Vinson. The child, who is now in the hospital at the McLean residence, is the daughter of a woman who has been in the hospital for some time. The child is now in the hospital at the McLean residence, and is expected to be discharged in a few days.

Master Vinson Walsh McLean loves babies. One day last winter he was walking with the man who performs the office of a baby-sitter, and he was incidentally supposed to be a detective employed to watch over him and prevent the possibility of his being kidnapped.

Two nursemaids, with their respective charges came along and engaged the attention of the child's guardian, leaving him for the moment to his own devices. He rushed up to one of the nursemaids, buried his face in the white fur rug which covered a dear little girl baby and then, looking up, he said: "I just love babies, don't you?"

Truant Wife Is Found On Steamer for Italy

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—How a man persuaded a woman to desert her husband, take her two infants and what ever ready money she could lay hands on and flee with him to New York was told at police headquarters when Antonio Sacco, twenty-two years old, and Mrs. Flomenia De Centi, twenty-six years old, were locked up charged by the police with abduction and grand larceny.

The chief of police of Freeport, Pa., had asked that the man and the woman be arrested, saying that Mrs. De Centi had disappeared with money belonging to the husband and the two De Centi children, Victoria, eight months, and Amelia, two years.

When arrested Mrs. De Centi was about to sail on the Italian liner America for Naples.

Police are unable to understand why Sacco persuaded the woman to leave Freeport and then put her aboard ship for Italy. Sacco is charged with abduction and grand larceny.

Lost $300 Gem Is Sole Voorhees Murder Clue

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—The Chicago police department is at sea today regarding the assassin who shot down Frank R. Voorhees, millionaire war stock broker, last Saturday night.

The only clue was the loss of a $300 diamond stud ripped from the victim's shirt front as he lay dying in front of his home. The theory that the man's sole war munitions to the allies prompted the shooting is being followed up, but the police say attempted robbery may have been the motive.

All "Movie" Censors.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 25.—Every State employee in Pennsylvania became a movie censor today when Gov. Governor Granger called on heads of all departments to aid in enforcement of the state censorship law by reporting to the board of censors any film displayed without the board's official O. K.

Edith Storey Tells What She Thinks Is Essential to Real Success

"Sincerity."

Edith Storey said it and looked it as she waited yesterday afternoon for Manager Arthur Robb to get through with his introduction of her to a Garden Theater audience, as the answer to a question as to what is the greatest attribute to success in motion picture making. A minute later she walked on the stage before the audience and acted it.

That is probably the whole story of Edith Storey's career as a motion picture star. And she thinks it is the whole story of the business of acting. She came to Washington Saturday rather fearful of what the consequences would be. She has not made a business of appearing before audiences in person for a long time, and it was ten years ago, while she was a very little girl, that she last appeared on the stage in Washington. The business of appearing before an audience just as you show yourself and talk about yourself is the most embarrassing thing in the world, Miss Storey has found, and she didn't know exactly what her friends among the picture patrons would think of her.

It was because of this combination of modesty and timidity that seem rather odd in an actress who had virtually been raised on the stage and has appeared before larger audiences ever since she was a baby, that Miss Storey was asked what she put into her work in characters on the stage that took away this fear of the audience. And it was then that she answered:

"Sincerity."

"The sincerity with which an actress portrays a part should so consume her attention that she has no thought of the audience. I believe that earnestness in all things—perhaps I should say success or accomplishment in all things—is measured truly and surely by the sincerity with which a person does those things."

"In the parts I have played on the stage and in motion pictures I have tried to bring the character I am acting to myself. In other words, to put myself in the place of the character. I do not think I do that thing in the way that is most natural to me—always, undoubtedly, in the character. Whatever success I have had has been due to this. I have tried to make every character ring true to myself."

"Success in motion pictures is not easy, and it is not anywhere near as easy now as it used to be for a person without experience to succeed in even getting an opportunity to show what they can do. I know there are many girls who would make good actresses if they had the chance. But please believe me the chance is very hard to obtain just now. I would not advise anyone to go into motion pictures—no young girl I mean—unless she is prepared to face the hardest competition and bitter disappointment. And I certainly think that girls who want to become actresses should study all they know how to fit themselves for the chance if it should happen to come to them."

"Acting isn't easy. It is very hard work. It is work that, well and faithfully done, leaves the mind as tired as the body. Women who feel that the monotony of the home life is too much for them, who are tired with the everyday struggle with ordinary affairs should not think to find relief on the stage or in the motion picture studio."

"On the contrary they will work harder physically than a washer-woman and they will find themselves more tired mentally than the housewife with greatest of family cares. At the same time there is that about the life which is uplifting and ennobling."

"An actress, if she is really in earnest gets much from every character she plays. She feels a part of the life, a part of the thought of the people, and that what she is doing—no matter what the character—might be—adding to the real things in the world, is making some one happy, or giving some one relief from thought of themselves or their troubles. And that is the thought of a real philosopher as he has placed it in the building of a character in his story, and develop that thought in a natural, human way. It is worth while. But the development must be human and it must be sincere. So, when mother does approve the smile is just a tiny bit sweeter, and certainly a little more satisfied. Miss Storey's mother goes with her on her journeys in making pictures and to the studio. She is her confidante and her best friend. And Mrs. Storey is just about as proud of Miss Edith as Miss Edith is proud of the pride of Mrs. Storey."

While seeing Miss Storey act is one of the real pleasures of watching a motion picture, and has been for some time, to me, the half hour spent with her personally, listening to her honest enthusiasm for her work has given an added value to the memory of every picture in which she has appeared and to the anticipation of those in which she will appear in the future.
